

Introduction (English)

A few years (and even earlier than that according to the Count of Aranda and the Spanish Ambassador, Onís) before Mexico's independent life, the North Americans conspired against a younger and weaker nation (not in terms of territory or population) that was plagued by wars, economic issues, a decaying mining industry and other unspeakable actions of conflicting interests and spirits. We allowed our northern territories to be colonized, under certain conditions and circumstances that were never respected, but our guest betrayed us, violated our hospitality and all this was done in violation of the migratory regulations that existed back then. They wanted to buy our Texan land and they received a resounding. So, then they decided to take up arms, "the reason of force and not the force of reason." Those mercenaries, pirates and filibusters came up with a "plan", with the help of American spies (Poinsett) and the government, so that they could "obtain an uprising before Mexico's Independence." Unable to react with military force following the "Battle of the Alamo", an unforgivable careless act in the of San Jacinto, our country's fate changed drastically. The leader of the Mexican army has been captured and signed the "Treaties of Velasco", which have very little legal value, and in 1836 after these painful events, Mexico lost Texas.

After spending three months in Washington with Polk, Santa Anna moved to Cuba and betrayed Mexico, through Atocha and Slidell. That crook went back to his country under the protection of the North American army to Veracruz (blocked by sea) so that he could fulfil his plan to jointly intervene and invade Mexico in a war to conquer even more territory (1846-1848). An American lawyer and congressman, defender of Mexico before his compatriots wrote: "The annexation of Texas did exactly the same thing the smell of blood does to a hungry wolf and made them eager to acquire more Mexican territories. Instead of being satisfied, it made them more ferocious." (1836, 1848, 1853, 1859... Juárez, Díaz, Madero, Carranza, Obregon.)

Polk was determined to do everything he couldn't do with a pen, with a sword! If he couldn't buy these territories, he has the insane purpose of conquering them. At the height of his cynicism, during his campaign in 1844/45, the acquisition of California was his administration's main objective. A while later, they were unhappy with being dispossessed and used the arguments of "manifest destiny" and slavery to expand territorially towards the Pacific (Texas, New Mexico and California). Once again, our compatriots refused to give up that land in exchange for money. So, they invaded Mexico, without the authorization of the United States' Congress and without a formal declaration of war. They reached Rio Bravo (not the Nueces River) imploring the motive of a "false flag," not knowing the boundaries and terms established in the Adams-Onís Treaty (1819) and that's how they ambushed San Francisco-Monterey, New Mexico (General Kearny), Tamaulipas (General Taylor) and Veracruz (General Scott). We were militarily invaded by this conspiracy and their clear intentions, since we didn't want to sell these territories, of taking or "stealing" these vital territories. This obligated us to defend ourselves in an undeserved and unmerciful war that painted us red. We were very unbalanced politically and militarily, full of economic distress and social controversy, every man for himself, liberals against conservatives, centralists against federalists, masonic rites (York and Scottish). The constitution of 1824 separated that which was once united. The carta magna of 1836 was a justification.

It's also worth noting that other nations also had the perverse, unspeakable and identical purposes of conquering those territories. We lost the war (1846-1848), our soldiers were defenseless and malnourished, but were defeated honorably, as is often the case. Our leaders betrayed us with deceit and/or malice (equally reprehensible) and we involuntarily contributed to that defeat where Mexico was "mutilated" and lost over half our territory! Almost three million square kilometers! Ultimately, we signed a treaty that was illegal, illegitimate, unjust (which was also recognized by the attackers themselves), the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (February 2, 1848). If you look at this from a legal universal perspective, it violates international norms of customary law, peremptory norm, this "agreement" is null and void, it's affected – since then and until now – completely nullified, which authorizes us to sue the United States of America via an assembly with the United Nations and before the International Court of Justice, based on the Charter of the United Nations, the Vienna Convention, the Statutes of the Organization of American States, the declarations of human rights and the arguments found in the legislative bodies and judicial precedents. In case the terms of public international law determine that we cannot acquire these "occupied territories", not allowing the treaty to be validated in any way, we must go back and records its historical effects to the precise moment of the unjustified violence that was briefly narrated.

And if it's not possible for these "occupied territories" to be restituted for several reasons, the next step would be to seek compensation for the damages (loss) and restitution (loss of profits), caused by dispossession, use, and enjoyment of the soil and subsoil for over 168 years. Yes, more than a century and a half. They're rich because of what they took away from us, we're poor because they robbed us.

I'd like to imagine Trump with eyes and mouth wide open when he hears about the historical and exemplary multitrillion debt and its consequences. Assuming he's still president, since he's managed to antagonize Latinos, blacks, Muslims, Arabs, Chinese, Europeans, Australians, the Vatican and even the Russians.

For Mexicans ... "the past did not happen." For the Americans ... "the past has already passed."

Today, this colonialist struggle between Anglo-Saxons and Hispanics is no longer about land, but rather economic conquest and its weapon, the dollar.

The national struggle must be something more than a struggle about ideologies, culture, language, dignity, sovereignty. Mexico fights for peace and respect for self-determination among all the countries of the earth, our own universal address. Mexico fights and will continue to fight for the future generations. Listen carefully, fight for Mexico, we are and will continue fighting for the whole world, at the same time.

It seems like fate stands in the way of the Mexican nation becoming the champion of human rights and international law, wrapped up by the global consensus, in times where there's a demagnetized geopolitical compass.

Assuming -without granting anything- the validity of the treaty, the international obligation of both countries is to live in harmony and "good neighborliness" and with full and reciprocal respect for human rights. With the American electoral result, there is a presumed, but well-founded abandonment and ignorance of these laws in a landscape full of animosity, intolerance, discrimination, racism, xenophobia, and the consequence is that families and homes are being destroyed. In conclusion: From a multidisciplinary point of view, there are no illegal immigrants. The only illegals are the Americans in our territory and the infamous, cowardly and absurd wall that must be built on the borders of what was (and is) our homeland, which are the states of California, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, Texas and part of Colorado, Arizona, Wyoming, Idaho, Oklahoma and Kansas, according to our geographical understanding, which is computer science of geography.

In 1865, after achieving peace in the American Civil War, Ulysses Grant said: "I look back at that war as one of the most unjust wars ever fought by a stronger nation against a weaker one."

In 1947, a hundred years later, before the first visit of a leader of the USA to Mexico, Harry Truman (in front of the monument of the Heroic Cadets or "Niños Heroes") stated and promised: "We will check the theory of non-intervention, which means that a powerful nation does not have the right to impose its will on a weaker one, solely because of force." This is a confession of the disgrace that was committed.

A few months ago, Mr. Vladimir Putin said: "If you want Crimea, give Texas back to the Mexicans."

Finally, I'd like to add that the USA has intervened, violating foreign sovereignty, in over 80 countries. Therefore, all fellow states should request that they be expelled from the "United Nations" and its antidemocratic presence and right of veto of the World's Security Council.

Mr. Trump, I respectfully remind you what Herodotus said: " In peace sons bury fathers, but in war fathers bury sons." Mexico's problem isn't their neighborhood, it's their neighbor.

Mexico's President should govern Rio Bravo and Allende, not just half of the Mexicans. Viva Mexico! Long live Mexico!

Mr. Guillermo Handan

SEÑOR TRUMP....LE RECUERDO, RESPETUOSAMENTE, LO QUE DIJO HERODOTO: " ES NATURAL QUE LOS HIJOS ENTIERREN A SUS PADRES, PERO EN LA GUERRA, SON LOS PADRES, QUIENES SEPULTAN A SUS HIJOS"

EL PROBLEMA DE MEXICO, NO ES LA VECINDAD, ES EL VECINO....

EL PRESIDENTE MEXICANO DEBE GOBERNAR NO SOBRE LA MITAD DE LOS MEXICANOS, SINO " ALLENDE EL RIO BRAVO"..... VIVA MEXICO!!!!
